"HIM DAMN FINE FIGHT," REPORT OF APACHE SCOUT ON BATTLE

JURY'S POLITICS TO BE WITHHELD; ELECTION TRIAL

State Defending Mosely and Hogan Before U. S. Court; Activity Tomorrow.

Points will not be allowed by Judge John H. Coffey to the defense in the selection of jurors for the trial of Dan Hogan of Tulsa and Tom Moely of Washington, charged by the United States government with having violated election laws in Blaine county, Oklahoma, in 1912. Testimonies to that effect were called in by Judge Coffey this morning in preparation for the trial, which is to begin at 10 o'clock tomorrow. John Faith and attorneys for the defense of the accused men. Neither side will be permitted to ask the politics of a prospective juror.

Mosely and Hogan were indicted by federal grand jury at Tulsa in January, 1915, following the 1912 election. The specific charge against them is conspiring to deprive citizens of their constitutional right to vote. It is alleged that without the consent of the third members of the Blaine county election board, of which they were members, they chose not the ballot in session according to law, but instead, after secret ballot.

Successive trials.

The trial of the two defendants on a second indictment, Judge Coffey has been suspended by trial, a new date having been set for the trial in Guthrie last year.

James Clegg and Bell, a local lawyer, state attorney general, are counsel for the defense. United States Attorneys John Faith and Booth Merrill and Tom McMeekin, his assistants, are the prosecution.

It is said that the attorneys for the state are paid from what remains of a state appropriation made for the defense of the Bechtel-Gilman case, a similar one, sometime ago. This claim could not be confirmed this morning.

Hung Jury at Guthrie.

In the trial at Guthrie, Judge Coffey permitted attorneys for the defense to ask questions regarding the political beliefs of prospective jurors. He announced this morning, however, that he had changed his mind. The United States attorneys did not take advantage of the political question provision in the Guthrie case, which resulted in a hung jury.

It was generally believed around the judicial building that the selection of a jury would commence early the next morning, and that actual work on the case would not begin until late afternoon. And this was also expected to be prolonged in the trial.

ALLEGED RESORT INTO LIMELIGHT

House Where Marguerite Ellis Was Shot, Visited by County Officers Monday.

No. 312 West California avenue, where Dr. N. Monroe of Tulsa shot Marguerite Ellis, an inmate, was brought into the limelight again today when County Attorney Embry filed an information in the county court against Dr. Clegg, charging him with being an habitual drunkard. The master of Undergraff followed a tour of inspection conducted by Sheriff Clinton and two deputies Monday night. Undergraff's place was the first visited.

According to the sheriff, Undergraff, unaware of the identity of his "guru," made incriminating offers.

"Do you know who I am?" asked the sheriff.

"No, I don't," replied Undergraff.

"Well, I am the sheriff. I am going up until tomorrow night to get out of here."

The sheriff sent a deputy to the place last night, but Undergraff had not moved and his arrest followed.

Following reports that the "red-light" districts were opposing County Atty. Embry sent officers to investigate only one arrest had taken place at noon today.

Mother's Gingerbread.

ONCE upon the earliest recollections of my childhood in Toronto, Canada, is of the Saturday morning baking. Little Jack and I would go out on the front steps and play with our mothers, but always did we have a joyful eye and an alert ear for the kitchen steps in another of whose tricks action took place.

How would go the oven, and then there would stand out in the morning breads, the wonder of wonder performances of hot, spicy gingerbread, baking in the oven.

Are you sure, mother, there aren't some ergands you want us to run for you?" we would all ask, as we trod to the back steps and peeked into the kitchen. And when she did remember me, it almost amounted to a tussle cuff battle between us three children to see which would be the lucky one for the payment meant the big yellow bowl around the sides of which still clung the tabs of batter!

I wonder if there ever lives a child who some time in his life hasn't run little fingers around the edge of a cake bowl and licked those fingers until every vestige of the dough was swallowed!

Sometimes, if mother was in a very bad mood, she would put three little wooden pins to the oven and these were never harvested than the big structure, for they were decorated with raisins and spines and sometimes a sprig of citrus.

When Little Jack and I were trudging on the road away from mother, sometimes we were so lonely that we dreamed if we closed our eyes we could whisk ourselves like the fairy genii of old back to our little home in Toronto. It seems to me that every time I

Answers to Correspondents

Mary C. I am sorry. I cannot respond to your advertisement because for testing bleaching on the face. Sometimes they are the result of sweating and sweat troubles. If I were you, I would consult your physician.

Constance R. and Jessie R. Without knowing you, it would be difficult for me to judge whether you are suited for pictures or not. You girls must realize that looks are only one of the attributes needed to become successful actresses. You must have talent, perseverance and the ability to work hard.

D. J. D. I cannot give you any more encouragement than I give others about becoming a moving picture actress. Having had experience in vaudeville and made a success, I would not think you would find it difficult to secure an engagement.

Gladie H. Mary Martin, known as the "mother of the matinee," has been with the Vitagraph company. She was well known as an actress before she entered the moving picture field.

Mrs. E. W. Your little girl's picture is very pretty. But such a healthy child should be allowed to go to school instead of trying to become a moving picture actress.

For the first time in the history of the Oklahoma City Advertising Club, 36 business women attended its meeting today at 10 in the Skirvin Hotel. Perhaps a dozen from various local women's clubs, officers of the Advertising Club of the World, delivered their fifth and last address of a series—the Low Art of Making a Profit.

Roskildine declared that the average merchant of the day was progressing so rapidly in his business as to his partner in their demands. Much of profit now disclosed was due to this fact.

Another condition, that of increasing cost of manufacture and raw materials was assigned by him as reason for many commercial failures.
